A system that will help you master your emotions and finally free yourself from the bondage of anger.

Luckily, such a system exists, and I will tell you all about it soon.

But first, know that...

You Are Not Alone

If you are experiencing issues with anger, you are NOT alone.

It may surprise you, but experiencing issues with anger is a very common problem.

In fact, almost 80% of people report experiencing issues with anger, abuse or violence at some point in their lives.

Not only that, but studies show that anger issues are one of the leading causes of divorce throughout the world.

Anger Management Made Simple

In other words, anger is destroying marriages and families worldwide.

Not only that, but research shows that anger issues are on the rise, with most people reporting feeling angrier now than they ever have before.

With all of this in mind, please know that you are NOT alone.

You are NOT the only one experiencing issues with anger, and you are certainly not the only one looking for a solution.

There is HOPE, and there is help available.

You can learn to control your anger, and this book will show you how.

But before we get into this, let me introduce myself...

Who Am I?

My name is Alastair Duhs and I am an anger expert with over 30 years of experience teaching over 15,000 men and women to control their anger, master their emotions and create calmer, happier and more respectful relationships.

I am also a member of the New Zealand Association of Counsellors and an Executive Contributor to "Brainz Magazine" -a world-leading publication in entrepreneurship, personal development and leadership.

Anger Management Made Simple

In other words, I know what I'm talking about when it comes to anger management.

However, this was not always the case.

Thirty years ago, I was a young trainee counsellor. I was fresh out of University and just wanted to help people.

My first job was running anger management groups at a counselling centre in Hamilton, New Zealand.

I remember my first group like it was yesterday.

Sitting in front of me were 25 men, all of whom had been court-ordered to attend my anger management group.

As the group began, I quickly realized I was in WAY over my head.

These men were angry. They did NOT want to be there. And there was no way that they wanted to listen to what I had to say.

I was utterly unprepared for how to help them with their anger, and I quickly became overwhelmed.

By the end of the first session, I was a complete mess.

You see, I had trained in traditional therapeutic approaches to anger management. This meant I was taught to ask my clients to talk about their feelings, explore their childhood issues, and understand the "root causes" of their anger.

Over time, the theory goes, this would help my clients to gain insight into their anger, and eventually allow them to manage it more effectively.

Anger Management Made Simple

This is the same approach many anger management counsellors and programmes use today.

The problem is: This approach simply does not work.

In fact, it often makes things worse.

I soon realized that the men I was working with didn't want to talk about their feelings, explore their childhood issues, and understand the "root causes" of their anger.

Instead, they wanted simple, practical TOOLS to control their anger in the real world - not some touchy-feely exploration of their childhood, upbringing or "inner emotional world".

So I went back to the drawing board.

I started reading everything I could on anger management.

I started experimenting with different techniques, tools and strategies. I went to conferences, took courses, spoke to other anger management counsellors, and tried every anger management technique under the sun.

But no matter how much I read or how many courses I took, I couldn't find a system that would work over and over again with all my clients, regardless of their gender, age, ethnicity, or socio-economic background.

Anger Management Made Simple

I started to feel like I would never find a solution.

But then, one day, everything changed.

A Life-Changing Discovery

It was a typical day at work.

I was running my anger management group, and we were exploring the concept of "triggers" - the things that set us off and make us angry.

One of the men in the group, we'll call him "John", raised his hand and said: "I know what my trigger is. It's my wife. She makes me so angry. I can't stand it."

I asked John to elaborate, and he told me that his wife was constantly nagging him, criticizing him and making him feel like he was never good enough.

When she did this, John said, he would "lose it" and lash out at her.

This was causing considerable problems in their relationship, and John was DESPERATE to find a way to control his anger.

So I asked John a simple question: "When your wife is criticizing you, and you start to feel your anger rising, what thoughts are going through your head?"

John thought for a moment, then said: "I'm thinking that she's always doing this, she's always picking on me, and I can't stand it anymore."

I then asked John to rate how angry he felt at these times on a scale of 1 to 10, with 10 being the angriest.

John said he felt an 8.

So I asked him to close his eyes and take a deep breath.

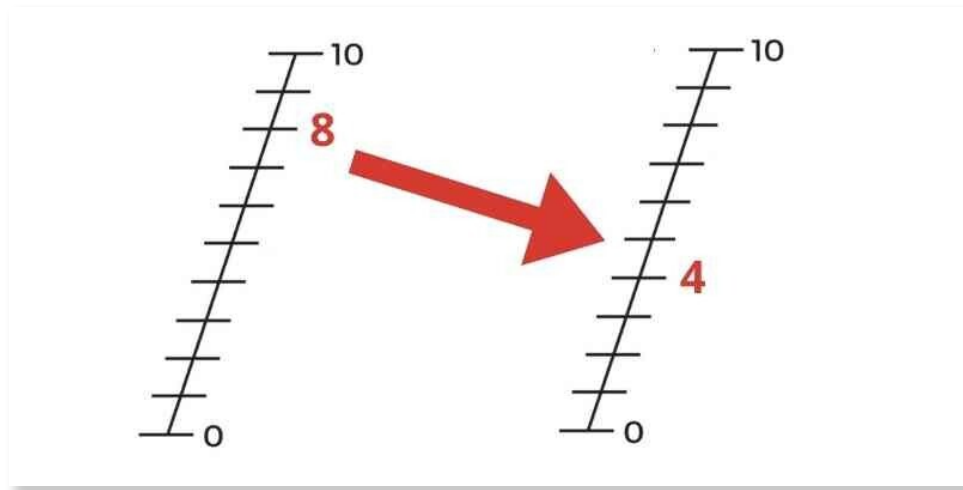

Anger Management Made Simple

As John did this, I said: "I want you to imagine that your wife is in front of you, criticizing you. But this time, instead of thinking, "She's always doing this. She's always picking on me" I want you to think, "She's just having a bad day. She's under a lot of stress, and she doesn't mean it."

John did as I asked, and when he reopened his eyes, I asked him to rate how angry he would feel in this situation...

This time, John said he would feel a 4.

By changing his thoughts, John's anger levels went from an 8 to a 4.

I was SHOCKED.

I had never seen anything like it before.

I had always thought that talking about your feelings, exploring your childhood issues and understanding the "root cause" of your anger was the key to managing anger.

But at that moment, I realized that the key to managing anger doesn't lie in talking about your feelings, exploring your childhood issues or understanding the "root cause" of your anger.

The key to managing anger lies in changing the way you THINK.

If you can change how you think, you can control your anger.

Anger Management Made Simple

This statement is so important; let me repeat it:

If you can change how you think, you can control your anger.

It's really that simple.

The Birth Of A Revolutionary System

After my life-changing discovery, I knew I had to find a way to help my clients change the way they thought in situations that made them angry.

But I didn't know how.

I tried using traditional techniques like Cognitive-Behavioural Therapy (CBT), but they just didn't work.

I even tried things like meditation and positive affirmations, but they didn't seem to make a dent in my clients' anger levels.

I was starting to feel FRUSTRATED.

I knew I was onto something, but I just couldn't figure out how to make it work.

Then, one day, I had a breakthrough.

I was reading a book on psychology, and I came across an idea called "Cognitive Reframing".

Cognitive Reframing is a TOOL that allows anyone to radically change how they THINK about a situation.

Over the next few months, I set to work on developing a system that would allow my clients to use cognitive reframing to change their thoughts in situations that made them angry.

I tested this system with my anger management clients, and the results were AMAZING.

Anger Management Made Simple

Within days, men and women I worked with reported drastic reductions in their anger levels.

Some said it was like a "miracle" - they couldn't believe how quickly and easily the system worked.

Many clients, who had been struggling to control their anger for years, said it was the first time they had ever felt truly in control.

One client told me that after using the system for just a few weeks, his wife said, "It's like you're a different person - I don't even recognize you anymore."

I was absolutely THRILLED.

In no time, my clients were calmer, happier and more in control than they had EVER been before.

Husbands and wives on the brink of divorce were suddenly getting along better than they had in years.

Parents who had been struggling to deal with their children's tantrums could now stay calm and in control.

And men and women who had been struggling with anger management issues for their entire lives were finally able to find peace.

It was incredible to see the positive impact that this system was having on people's lives.

Anger Management Made Simple

And the best part was that this system was not even that complicated.

Many people who spent 10 minutes a day learning the tools and techniques I taught them saw massive improvements in their anger control in just a few weeks (or less).

I was BLOWN AWAY by the results.

I knew I had to share this system with as many people as possible.

And that's how "The Complete Anger Management System" was born.

Introducing: The Complete Anger Management System

The Complete Anger Management System is a step-by-step programme that teaches you EVERYTHING you need to know about controlling your anger, mastering your emotions and creating a calmer, happier and more respectful relationship.

The Complete Anger Management System is based on my many years of experience as an anger management coach and counsellor, and has been proven to work, over and over again.

I will tell you more about The Complete Anger Management System in a moment.

Anger Management Made Simple

Before I do, let me share 3 common myths about anger management that are important to avoid.

AVOID The 3 Anger Management Myths

When it comes to anger management success, 3 myths can trip people up and prevent them from achieving their goals.

Myth 1: "I Can Do It On My Own"

I call this myth "The Lone Ranger Myth."

The belief that you can control your anger all by yourself is extremely common. And it's also very dangerous.

The truth is, learning to control your anger is difficult to do on your own.

After all, it has taken me 30 years of experience and training to develop the skills I teach in The Complete Anger Management System. And that has been my full-time job!

Do you have the time, energy and motivation to put in that kind of work?

Probably not.

And even if you did have the time, why would you want to reinvent the wheel?

If you let me, I can show you the quickest, easiest and most effective way to control your anger.

Myth 2: "It Will Take Forever To See Results"

This is what I call "The Slow and Steady Myth."

Many people believe it will take months, or even years, to learn to control their anger.

Nothing could be FURTHER from the truth!

Anger Management Made Simple

In fact, I have seen people make massive progress with their anger in weeks, days and even sometimes hours!

Why?

The answer lies in the fact that your THOUGHTS generate your anger. And once you know how to change those thoughts, you can INSTANTLY change how you respond to situations, meaning that you do not get angry in the first place.

It may take a little time to learn how to do this effectively. But once you have the skills, the results are incredible.

Myth 3: "I Need To Attend Counselling To Deal With My Anger"

This is what I call "The Counselling Myth."

Many people believe that to deal with their anger, they need to see a therapist or counsellor to talk about their issues.

This is not true!

In fact, most people who attend counselling for anger management find that it does little to help them.

Why?

The answer is simple: counselling focuses on the past. While the past may have played a role in shaping your anger, it is NOT the cause of your anger now.

The cause of your anger is how you think about the events in your life, right now.

And that means that the ONLY way to deal with your anger is to change how you think.

I know this sounds simple. But it's true.

Anger Management Made Simple

OK, now that you understand the 3 myths of anger management, let's look at the 3 game-changing secrets you need to know to break the cycle of anger, abuse and violence that so many people get stuck in.

Secret 1: Anger Just Does Not Work

Secret 1 is that anger just does not work.

While this secret may sound simple and obvious, it is an incredibly powerful realisation.

When you understand that no matter the situation you are in, anger makes things worse rather than better, it gives you the motivation to try something different - to find a better way of expressing yourself and handling tough situations.

To explain this more, let's start with a common misconception.

Many people believe that getting angry gives them power or control over a situation.

For example, you might think that if you get angry enough, the other person will back down or give you what you want.

But in reality, the idea that anger gives you power is an illusion. When you get angry, it only serves to take away your power and leave you feeling out of control. It takes away your ability to think clearly, connect with others and find a solution that works for both sides.

Anger may give you a temporary rush of energy and make you feel more powerful, but it rarely gets you the outcome you're looking for.

Anger Management Made Simple

In other words, anger may give you a temporary rush of energy and make you feel more powerful, but it rarely gets you the outcome you're looking for. In fact, it almost always has the opposite effect.

As you probably know too, in reality the price you pay for anger is steep.

When you act out in anger, it damages your relationships, your health, and even limits your opportunities in life.

I have spoken to literally thousands of men and women in the last 30 years, for example, who have lost relationships, jobs, and even their freedom because of their anger.

Every outburst of anger or rage you experience chips away at your well-being and the quality of our connections with others. And worse still, if you don't take action to control it, anger has a way of multiplying over time and becoming worse.

So, now that we've established that anger just doesn't work, let me remind you of something incredibly important.

You are not defined by your anger.

You have the power to choose how you respond to every situation, no matter what it is. No matter how long you've been dealing with anger issues, no matter what kind of experiences you have had in the past, it's never too late to control your emotions and create a better outcome for yourself.

You can learn how to manage your anger in healthier ways. You can break the cycle of negative patterns and establish lasting change. And you can create a more peaceful, respectful and meaningful relationships with yourself and those around you.

The first step to do this is to take action.

Anger issues don't fix themselves, you have to take charge of yourself and your future. I will give you options later in this ebook on how to do this.

Anger Management Made Simple

So, now that you've learned that anger doesn't work, then the next step forward is to learn how to stop your anger from escalating and take control of your emotions.

That brings me to my second game-changing secret...

Secret 2: The Key To Anger Management Is Awareness

Now, although this secret again sounds simple, it is very powerful.

For example, imagine that you are becoming frustrated, annoyed or angry at your partner.

If you are not aware of how you are feeling in this situation there is nothing you can do to change how you are acting in this situation.

However, if you are aware that you are feeling frustrated, annoyed or angry, there are many things you can do to change how you are acting in this situation.

If you ARE aware that you are feeling frustrated, annoyed, or angry, there are MANY things you can do to change how you are acting in this situation.

This idea is so powerful that it is worth repeating:

If you are not aware of how you are feeling in a situation there is nothing you can do to change how you are acting in that situation.

Anger Management Made Simple

However, if you are aware that you are feeling frustrated, annoyed or angry, there are many things you can do to change how are acting in that situation.

With this powerful truth in mind, the next logical question is:

“How can I become aware that I am feeling frustrated, annoyed or angry?”.

A simple answer to this question is to notice what I call your "Early Warning Signs" of Anger.

Your Early Warning Signs of Anger are the physical, behavioural, emotional and mental signs that indicate that your anger is starting to build.

For example, some common Early Warning Signs of Anger include wanting to yell, feeling tense, having a racing heart, thinking negative thoughts or breathing quickly.

When you become aware of your Early Warning Signs of Anger, it is then possible to take steps to control and manage your anger before it escalates further.

When I work with clients, I teach them to recognise their Early Warning Signs of Anger before they become too heated.

I also teach them how to deescalate their anger before it gets out of hand.

If you want to learn more about how to do this, then please visit my website angersecrets.com to book a free 30-minute anger assessment call with me.

For the moment however, remember that the second game-changing secret to controlling your anger is to become aware when you are getting angry.

If you are aware of how you are feeling in a situation there many things you can do to change how you are acting in that situation.

Anger Management Made Simple

However, if you are not aware that you are feeling frustrated, annoyed or angry, there is nothing you can do to change how you are acting in that situation.

Let's now move on to the third game-changing secret of anger management.

Secret 3: You Create Your Anger

The third secret you need to know to control your anger in any situation is that you create your anger.

This secret may sound counter-intuitive, but understanding this concept is pivotal in mastering your anger. Many people, for instance, believe their anger is caused by external factors such as people, events, or circumstances.

For example, they may think that they get angry because of something their partner did or how their children acted. It's like there's a stormy, external environment that causes them to get angry.

In reality however, this is never true. Anger is something that comes from within you.

It is your perception of a situation, rather than the situation itself, that causes you to become angry.

Let me repeat this statement as it is absolutely vital in understanding how to control your anger:

It is your perception of a situation, rather than the situation itself, that causes you to become angry.

In other words, your anger comes from within. It's how you THINK about external events or circumstances that leads to feelings of anger. Two people can experience the same situation and one person will become angry while the other won't.

Anger Management Made Simple

For example, imagine that you are driving your car and all of a sudden another car cuts in front of you dangerously. When this happens to you, what is the first thought that is likely to go through your mind?

If you are like most people, you will probably think something like "That driver is an idiot!!! How could they be so stupid?!!!"

This thought is likely to lead to feelings of anger. And because you are feeling angry, you are likely to respond to the other driver in an angry or abusive way, such as by yelling at them, giving them the finger or tailgating them.

Now imagine that you are in the same situation, except that this time you recognise the car that cuts in front of you. In fact, instead of being a stranger, it is your best friend John!

In this situation, what are you likely to think? If you are like most people, you will probably have more relaxed thoughts. You may think "Oh it's John! He must be in a hurry".

These thoughts are far less likely to trigger angry feelings. In fact, they are likely to make you smile and feel amused. You may even think that John recognized your car, and was just trying to annoy you.

In this case, you are much more likely to react in a calm way, such as by waving at John or giving him a thumbs up. You are unlikely to get angry at John, shout at him, give him the finger or tailgate him.

"That driver is an idiot. How could they be so stupid?"

"Oh, it's just John. He must be in a hurry".

So, what is the difference between these two situations?

In both situations, another car cut in front of you dangerously. However, the difference is in how you thought about the situation. In the first situation, you were angry because you thought "That driver is an idiot!!! How could they be so stupid?"

In the second situation, you were calm because you thought "Oh it's John! He must be in a hurry". The point is that it is not the event that happened to you that created your anger.

It is your thoughts about the event that created your anger.

In other words, you create your anger!

It is NOT the events that happen to you that create your anger. It is your THOUGHTS about the events that happen to you that create your anger.

This is an extremely important point to understand if you want to stay calm in any situation.

It is NOT other people, events or circumstances that create your anger. It is how you think about these things that creates your anger. So if you want to control your anger in any situation, the key is to change how you think about the situation.

This may sound like a daunting challenge, but I promise that with practice, it can become easy and natural.

Anger Management Made Simple

In fact, this is exactly what I teach my clients when we work together. We focus on changing their thinking patterns in order for them to take control of their anger and create calmer, happier and more respectful relationships.

At this point, you should understand the 3 game-changing secrets to controlling your anger. But understanding something is not the same as being able to apply it. And, of course, there is more to learning how to control your anger than what I have been able to share so far.

You will learn to communicate effectively with those you love, and how to build a stronger, more loving relationship with your partner, your children, and those you love.

These coaching sessions are your chance to get personal help and support from me, so that you can make sure you're on track to achieving your anger management goals.
